

Contracts — Performance, Breach and Discharge

1.
  - a. Velinda and Thelma enter into a contract. What are the ways in which Velinda can be discharged?
  - b. What are the ways in which both parties can be discharged?

2. What is a condition? Give an example of each of the following types of conditions: condition precedent, condition concurrent, conditions subsequent.

3. Russell promises to install whatever type and color of living room carpeting Nina chooses. Classify as an express, implied-in-fact, or implied-in law condition Nina's notification to Russell of her choice of type and color of carpeting. Compare and contrast this condition with the other two types of contractual conditions.

4. Explain what may constitute a material breach and list the several basic principles that must be applied to determine if a material breach exists in a given contract.

5.
  - a. List and summarize the situations where a contract is discharged by agreement of the parties.
  - b. List and summarize the situations where a contract is discharged by operation of law.

6. What is the difference between implied-in-fact and express conditions?